

About Piñon Nuts

The piñon tree is a slow-growing pine, found in rocky soils at high elevation (5,500 to 8,000 feet) in the 4 corners area of Arizona and New Mexico. It takes about 25 years to bear nuts in its egg-shaped cones, and about 75 years to produce nuts in commercial quantities. A healthy piñon will continue to produce for 300 years.

After the first frost, mature cones open and their nuts begin to fall. Tarps are spread beneath the trees and the branches are shaken to knock the remaining nuts loose. The entire harvest comes from wild, uncultivated trees.

The piñon has a high protein content. The Native Americans called piñons "starvation nuts", since the nuts were used as a staple food when crops were scarce. True Piñons have always been a southwestern delicacy. They are popular in pies, breads, pasta dishes, salads and especially our candy to enhance, enrich and complement the food flavors.

Winter 2018

Our founder and patriarch, George Buffett, grew his candy business with the same values and integrity that he used to raise his family. Honesty, fairness and hard work described George and those values are instilled in his family and in the business. The Buffetts are committed to continuing this tradition and therefore, we will always make the best candy we can make.

In our constant pursuit of quality, we use the finest ingredients: dairy fresh butter, real whipping cream, select nut meats, and pure chocolate. To allow these exquisite flavors to come through, no preservatives are added.

We proudly state:
